

Summary

- NLP is the foundation for text mining
- Computers are far from being able to understand natural language
 - Deep NLP requires common sense knowledge and inferences, thus only working for very limited domains
 - Shallow NLP based on statistical methods can be done in large scale and is thus more broadly applicable
- In practice: statistical NLP as the basis, while humans provide help as needed