

Atomic Radius (Size)

- Decreases across a row (period) – outer electrons in the same energy level

Hydrogen  Fluorine

- More protons in each element as you move across the row. More protons will create a stronger positive force, thus attracting the electrons more strongly, pulling them in and shrinking the size.