

Ionization Energy

- Increases across a row (period) – outer electrons in the same energy level

Hydrogen  Fluorine

- More protons in each element as you move across the row. More protons will create a stronger positive force, thus attracting the electrons more strongly and pulling them in closer to the nucleus, requiring MORE energy to remove an outer electron.