Older Models Provided Little or No Consistency

For example,
- the original Internet "news" system
- used several servers,
- each with a copy of the news.

When a user made a post,
- the text was sent to all servers,
- but the latency to each server varied,
- and sometimes copies were lost
- (and then took even longer to arrive).