

Feature Registration Enables Fusion of Sensor Data

Modern systems use both

- active sensors generate “point clouds” (with depth labels), and
- passive sensors to generate images.

Specific points on objects

- must be identified and equated
- (called feature registration)
- in order to combine the sensor information.

Example: which pixels/points correspond to the left front leg of the mailbox?

