Fewer Object Types Means Easier Identification

As with speech,
- a smaller "vocabulary" of objects
- makes identification easier.

For example, one might omit
- models of lions and elephants
- from many systems.

And almost no systems need to be able
- to spot a rampaging Tyrannosaurus Rex,
- despite the fact that most humans could
- (or so they think).