

Implementing Reliable Multicast

- Let's assume we have reliable unicast (e.g., TCP) available to us
- First-cut: Sender process (of each multicast M) sequentially sends a reliable unicast message to all group recipients
- First-cut protocol does not satisfy reliability
 - If sender fails, some correct processes might receive multicast M, while other correct processes might not receive M