

The above figure shows a color-coded contour map of the arrival time gap between the first and the second pulse in milliseconds. In other words, this figure shows the arrival time differential between the first of two adjacent sources. This is another way of looking at a sound systems predicted performance before any equipment is purchased. This same calculation in another design would help in the decision to utilize a stereo system.