

The above figure shows the solution. By using eight small, but very high quality speakers, mounted to, and partially hidden by the overhead beams, acoustical engineers were able to achieve excellent direct coverage of the congregation, putting very little acoustic energy on the walls. The red area is where the majority of the acoustic energy was directed, and as you can see, very little reached the walls.

